

February 2019 U3A Storytelling Newsletter

February marks National Storytelling Week

The wit and wisdom of ancient and traditional tales have stood the test of time, delving into their myths and legends.

Storytelling in an increasingly disconnected world is being given more and more importance in people's lives.

It gives them the space and voice to be heard.

What is Facebook and Twitter and all the other media apps if not just that space to talk about their lives and opinions.

Everyone loves a good story whether it is watching TV, going to the cinema or theatre or reading your favourite author.

Research suggests that 65% of our conversations are made up of gossip and personal stories.

Think about what kind of stories you like to hear and tell.

Create your own narrative and share it. If you don't try, you will never know how good you are.
